

What to say when all is said

Swar Kranti*

All words used,
All emotions described,
All philosophies stated,
What to say when all is said.

So if what is being said is not adding something to the world's gaining But the one who is saying is an addition to a tribe following:

Addition to a tribe of people who have realised that life is lived most beautifully when thrived in moments before finish line than after the line.

Addition to a tribe of people who Walked the path and as they did painted the town in their mid not red, but white, experiencing strife and mixing all hues of life.

Addition to a tribe of people who have realised that what is worthy is not always popular o' baby and that which is trendy is not always valuable medley.

Addition to a tribe of people who do somethings (like writing poetry) for the sheer joy of it and beauty and not for power or attachment and neither for paisa nor achievement.

Addition to a tribe of people who know that memories fade and slow, hundred thoughts come fleeting and go this (writing) is a tool able to convert ephemeral to eternal.

*Swar Kranti, Faculty, Human Resource, We School, Mumbai, India.

Email: swar.kranti@welingkar.org